“A world legal order should be established against genocide and war crimes, with rigorous and precise rules, along with a fully independent body of justice under the supervision of the United Nations General Assembly, and never under the Security Council, as long as veto power remains in effect granting exceptional privileges to just five countries, including the hegemonic superpower, which has used this power more than the rest of the permanent members of the Council combined”.

References to the original: I believe in the extraterritoriality of the honor and dignity of man, April 28, 2001

Source URL: http://www.fidelcastro.cu/en/citas/april-28-2001-1?width=600&height=600